BLOODY SUNDAY

30 JANUARY 1972

On 30 January 1972 a massive British military operation in Derry's Bogside, ended in the murder of thirteen unarmed and defenceless demonstrators and the wounding of fifteen others – one of whom died later of his injuries on 14 June 1972. The British Army identified the victims, gunmen and bombers. They claimed their soldiers had fired a 'bullet of fear' by mistake. The British Army declared the Bogside an 'unauthorised encampment'. The British Army declared the Bogside an 'unauthorised encampment'.

On 1 February a public inquiry headed by Lord Chief Justice Widgery was announced by the British Government. Widgery refused to take evidence from the vast majority of civilian eyewitnesses. Soldiers testified anonymously and in disguise. It was argued that their statements were altered to suit the British version of events.
